AIG launches PCG Women’s Network

London – 28 May 2014 – The Private Client Group (PCG) at AIG in the UK last week launched its PCG Women’s Network. Around 20 senior female brokers attended the inaugural networking event at The Savoy Hotel in London.

Ann Owen Head of International Private Client Group at AIG said: “To meet the challenges of today’s changing business world, AIG recognizes the need to embrace diversity, and the different and varied thinking that it brings. Many of our most important business partners are women, yet insurance remains a male-dominated industry.

“The aim of our PCG Women’s Network is to create a community of professionals with a shared interest in the professional development, attraction and retention of women in our industry. It will serve as a forum for members to get to know each other; form effective, lasting relationships; and address issues that are top of mind for them, their organizations and the industry as a whole. Our aim is to expand the network and we welcome interest from women who would like to get involved.”

John Sims, Head of Private Client Group at AIG in the UK said, “AIG is a great believer in diversity in the workplace. Not only is it the right thing to do but we feel that we can all benefit by harnessing the power of our differences. The Women’s Network is a good example of how that can be put into practice in our industry.”

The next PCG Women’s Network event will be held on 30th July.
